

California's Curt Winter builds the cleanest, trickiest, prettiest bikes on the planet. He owns BTR Moto and can build anything that you can dream.

This is Curt's nitro-burning, fuel-injected, open pro-class Harley-Davidson. It has about 200 horsepower and mind-boggling amounts of torque. The frame and swingarm are totally custom built from scratch.

Curt has a pro hillclimbing license, and competes as often as he can, riding his Harley in the open class, his trick, CR500 Honda in the 700 class, and a CR450F Honda in the 450 class. Here, he flies his CR500 up a hill in Northern California. His company, BTR, is also an excellent source for swingarm extensions and the special, custom, rear-metal fenders that are required at events that allow steel to be used on rear wheels. On the right is one of the exotic, hand-made, Harley-based "street-fighters" that he also produces. It is a pure work of art.
